A Company with a Reputation for Success

Since 1987 Lorman has been a leading resource for compliance based media, education and content for more than 1.4 million customers. Our passion is providing you world-class training to help you succeed in business and as a professional.

No one enters a business expecting it to fail. But many businesses do, often resulting in disputes between partners or a small group of ownership. Or, the business existed because of the financial support of one owner and the sweat and active involvement of other owners, and one side later decides that the dynamic is no longer working.

While these are business disputes, they often take on characteristics of a personal divorce with each side uncertain as to what is theirs or what options are available to them.

This information will help attorneys understand and evaluate these often misunderstood situations to help achieve positive client outcomes.
